Subject: Deposit Return Scheme - Consultation on Potential Models for Ireland

Hi,

I would like to add my opinion to this public consultation process.

I believe a deposit return type system would work brilliantly in Ireland. However, I think it should be incentivised to ensure maximum participation and encourage children to get involved in it. Instead of a deposit return scheme, I think it should be a purchase return scheme i.e. there is no added cost to the product that you then get back by returning it. the product stays the same cost and but you get a small return for returning the product.

I think this scheme should be rolled out across the countries schools encouraging children to earn pocket money by collecting these items at home and school and returning them to earn some money. These bottles and cans will be reused by the companies already making a profit on the sale of the item so I believe they should cover the cost of the returned product.

Thanks for allowing public participation in this and I look forward to seeing what the finished product will look like.
