Hi,

This is a great idea. I experienced it in Croatia before and really like the system they have there. There are machines in every supermarket, these machines collect bottles independently of where you purchased the product/bottle. The machine then issues a ticket that you can use to collect the money on the tills of the supermarket.

Rates: It would be better if it depends on the bottle type, but there is no need for much differentiation. Having different rates for plastic and glass would be simple enough.

Presentation: A video showing someone using the machine and cashing out the money would be sufficient, maybe.

Thank you for taking a step forward in saving our planet and reducing rubbish in the forest and seas.
