

Dears Sirs,

The below link far more eloquently puts into words the thrust of my submission on this matter. Although written more than 2 years ago it is even more relevant today.

The 3rd paragraph highlights in summary:

Of all elements within the aviation industry that are employment-rich, the so-called MRO (maintenance, repair and overhaul) sector has the greatest potential. Efficient, well-managed MRO companies can create a lot of jobs, if progressive government policies and innovative companies combine to attract increasing numbers of aircraft.

<https://www.irishexaminer.com/business/ireland-needs-more-aircraft-repair-firms-not-just-lessors-463259.html>

My company supplies and installs permanent and relocatable aircraft hangars that on a very cost efficient basis. Ideal for regional airports looking to develop additional revenue streams with the fall back position that the hangar could in the future be re purposed, moved or even sold.

[REDACTED]

Your sincerely

[REDACTED]

Phone: [REDACTED]
Mobile: [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]